KAMILA WOLSZCZAK

“We need to cultivate a bit of anthropomorphism - the idea that human agency has some echoes in nonhuman nature- to counter the narcissism of human in charge of the world.” Jane Bennett (2010)

Broken artefacts or debris are socially perceived as dirt. For me these are other-than-human beings and I work as a guide and mediator to bring them to life. The found matter and I are working in situ or we migrate to new places. Assembling together we gather an ex-centric presence, unwanted memory and lack of control with imaginary stories for increasing speculative visions in daily life. That co-creation uses a range of visuals media, assemblages, including performative sculpture, objects, performance, situations, walks, storytelling, audio and text. To animate and activate invisible worlds, I read urban public space as the scenography of human traces. With relational aesthetics and sticky, flexible materials, participatory experiences we create a vision of unheard voices to register the traces and compose new beings. That co-creative process proves the power of otherness and cooperation as a magic tool for real shifts in socio-matter relations.

TENTOONSTELLINGEN

- 2024 Cartographies of Matter The Balcony The Hague, Nederland The Cartographies of Matter exhibition explores the relations formed between bodies and matter through movement. Part of Kamila Wolszczak's artistic research on speculative artefacts, the works presented form paths and points of traces to experiment with the materiality of public space within the gallery space. The accelerated rhythm of life in cities has turned them into core grounds for neoliberal politics; our way we move and experience our surroundings becomes more and more individualist. New physical and conceptual connections cannot emerge spontaneously, while relating to other human or more-than-human bodies and structures is deemed almost unnecessary. At the same time, the ecological and social dimensions of our movement are highly overlooked. How can we re-imagine our co-existence within the urban environment? Kamila Wolszczak's research suggests speculation as a counter-practice to reimagine our collective being within the urban environment. The visual artist works with a variety of media and participatory processes, using the practice of walking as the means for deeper exploration. She reads the surroundings of public space as a scenography of human traces and non-human signs waiting to be translated. Her focus is on imaginaries that act as social tools for new possibilities to emerge. The artist works with combinations of organic matter to other natural or artificial materials such as clay, plastic and glue. The sense of touch works as a guide into experiencing, understanding and co-creating. Driven through curiosity and wander, she proposes an open-ended approach to being with(in) our surroundings by engaging with them in unexpected ways. This alternative practice of cartography proposes a deeper questioning and reflection on the politics of human movement. The exhibition aspires to create a symbolic space for reflection; an encounter with the aesthetics of waste, dirt, rupture. The narrative revolves around sculptural representations meant to trigger and invite viewers to critically navigate space. The works presented are formed through literal and metaphorical traces left behind; they are references to the overlooked and call for a shift in our perception. To follow various materials that are socially perceived as dirt is opening a new door to imaginary worlds every single time; new paths of possibilities for collective storytelling. Kamila Wolszczak

- 2023 Art to Make You Travel The Hague, Nederland Over het werk: niet-menselijke-wezens (en-ik) onthullen als gidsen en bemiddelaars hun leven. In 'Summer feet' zien we de plotselinge ontmoeting van menselijke voeten met de stekels van zee-egels in de Adriatische Zee. De blik van de toeschouwer wordt gestuurd naar de tijdelijke relaties van uiteenlopende lichamen in hetzelfde zoute water. Wolszczak heeft daarmee haar persoonlijke herinnering aan 'zwemmen in Kroatië' willen visualiseren."

than-human perspective within public space'. This research investigates interdisciplinary methods including subjective walks, assemblages, texts, audio-storytelling, interventions and participatory performance. The showcase of the research contains an installation with Instax photos I took of the broken artifacts* their imprints in the clay. I connected those pictures and sculptures with speculative texts which I wrote about my view on the live of artifacts. I found the artifacts on desire paths** in the urban environment of Scheveningen in The Hague. The aim of my research was to answer the question, how to reveal the agency of invisible human traces in public space?

*Artifacts are broken elements of artificial items made/given shape by humans, left in public space. **Desire path or short cut path are physical spaces created by human walking, an endless human desire and need-driven intervention, act of unconscious co-creation, urbanism failure.

2021 This Art Fair Saved in dust Amsterdam, Nederland Saved in dust In my artworks I confront daily life, disgust, contemplating nature and man with their by-products while prettying up the concept of dirt. During this live action, I am an operator, conductor and moment catcher. I'm referring to the seemingly irrelevant micro world saved in dust. The invisible becomes visible, all together on a plastic layer. This performance is the continuation of the growing visual archive of presence, here and now. 2019 Connecting...A Voyage Through Invisible Seas Group exhibition: Kamila Wolszczak / Sithabile Mlotshwa / Yuchen Li Amsterdam, Nederland The title refers to the settlement of dust and pollution in private and public spaces and the social search for a place and role on earth as a resident, neighbor, traveler and migrant. Settlement is a presentation of records of ephemeral moments from everyday life on adhesive tapes and other sticky surfaces, which are an analogue microworld recorder and metaphysical measure of reality, point, line, abstract composition of situations. Carefully selected elements from different places of the artist's residences, travels and meetings left a trail. Processed and designed with a view on the dialogue between the ephemeral and material world, they are elements of an exhibition consisting of an installation and performance. The artist asks herself and her audience about pollution as the witness of our everyday activities and its impact on our lives. An equally intriguing question is the identity and attachment to a place and trying to settle in a place just like dust. Wolszczak's works invite people to reflect on these issues, as well as to take part in a performance one to one with the artist in order to create a temporary community of settling. 'Settlement' it's a dimension that is outside of anthropocentric perspective, which brings us closer to an understanding of the human/non-human dynamics. Embedding is the continuation of the individual exhibition 'Draught' and project 'Layers' implemented since 2012. In recent presentations, Wolszczak presented the relations of time, motion and place, the movement of dust and adhesive tapes as analogue dust-recording machines.

2017 DRAUGHT Wrocław "Draught" is a continuation of the long-term project

"Layers", which I started in 2012 in Valencia and "Track records" - a record extended between Świnoujście and Ustka in 2015. Draught is a presentation of recording activities in a process where the common denominator is a transparent adhesive tape treated as an analog recorder of the microworld and a metaphysical measure of reality, point and line in the artist's hands. The title of the exhibition refers to both the everyday phenomenon of air movement, which is the pressure difference, as well as to pulling the tape medium in different spaces, catching invisible life movements in the tape. It is an attempt to visualize air migration in public and private space and the relationship between them. An important aspect is also the uncontrolled registration of reality that carries other lives invisible to our eyes. This is a form of a subjective archive of reality in different ways, but always through the same medium of 50mm x 66m roll of adhesive tape.

2018 Malta Festival Poznań Poznań, Polen
The main theme of this year's Malta Generator – the urban section of Malta Festival Poznań – is "doubting locality". One of the main ways of working with this issue are the "The architecture of relations" residencies implemented by artistic duos on Poznan estates, which were constructed in 1930s as a part of a social residential estates program. Inhabited until this day, they are the epitome of architectural projects the creators of which believed that engineering designs have the power to change social relations, elevating them above merely designing residential buildings. This seemingly utopian thinking has for a time been a dream put to action and offered the opportunity to have relatively decent living conditions to those who were for various reasons excluded. The residencies are held by duos of artists from various parts of Poland: Michał Mioduszewski and Arek Pasożyt, Kamila Wolszczak and Marcin Zalewski, Karolina Włodek and Adam Martyniak. Marcin Zalewski and Kamila Wolszczak became fascinated with the space of the Social Welfare Estate constructed in 1933. For over a dozen of years it has been a scene of an ongoing feud with the city regarding the purchase of land with preferential prices for long term inhabitants. The artists and the locals bring back one of the empty houses to life, where they created a Micro-museum of Social Remembrance "The Sarmatian Home". The museum has been open during the Night of Museums on 19 May. The artistic project will finish on 17 June with a picnic during the Lotaryńska Street Celebration Day. The "Sarmatian Home" design is a response to the lack of communal spaces, where inhabitants could work together. It is also an attempt to look at the past, the present and the future of the Social Welfare Estate, which increasingly more often becomes an object of interest for developers, who strive to introduce their own brand of "exoticism" to the location. Confrontation with personal objects belonging to the inhabitants presented on the exhibition aims to return the estate its rightful place in the communal memory of Poznanians. Creating a grass-roots institution presenting the stories and the objects belonging to the inhabitants of the estate is only one element of the residency. The artists also planned workshops for children from the local primary school no.48, there will be classes devoted to urban planning and the architecture of the estate. The effects of the teaching about the heritage of the Welfare Care Estate and the innovative thought of the Inter-war architects will be additionally presented at a school in Southern America with which the artists have made contact.
